Comer White Is Killed in Fall From Window

WALKING IN SLEEP CAUSED ACCIDENT, DECLARE FRIENDS

Coroner Donehoo Will Investigate Death of Assistant Manager of Howard Theater Today.

MRS. WHITE FINDS BODY OF HUSBAND

Victim Had Been Dead for Six Hours According to Undertaker; Funeral Tuesday.

Comer White, 24, assistant manager of the Howard theater, Sunday morning plunged to his death from the window of his apartment, 751 Highland avenue. Friends stated that he had been accustomed to walking in his sleep and that he had accepted this theory of the cause of his death. Coroner Donehoo will hold an investigation today.

The body was discovered about 6 o'clock by Mrs. White, who had been awakened by the cries of her young son, Comer, Jr. She noticed the open window in an adjoining room and looking out she saw the crumpled body of her husband on the ground.

Dead Six Hours.

R. S. Belknap, who lives in an adjoining apartment, was awakened by the screams of Mrs. White and rushed out into the court to the body.

At a member of the Fifth Georgia regiment, he saw service overseas, following his return to the United States, he entered the employ of the Curtis Publishing company, with headquarters in Atlanta. Ill health forced him to sever his connection with that company.

Mr. White was married, October 20, 1922, to Mrs. Eddie Landstreet, of Atlanta. He became assistant manager of the Howard theater January 1, of this year.

Announcement was made Saturday by J. J. Franklin, of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, which controls the Howard theater, that Mr. White and Howard Waugh, manager of the picture theater, had severed their connections with the institution. No reasons were given and it was not stated when these changes were to go into effect.

3 Automobile Accidents Due To Windstorm

Mrs. Sallie Clark Badly Hurt in Fall Sunday From Truck.

Mrs. Sallie Clark, 47, of 40 Rice street, is in a critical condition at Grady hospital as the result of a fall Sunday afternoon from a truck on Mount Perrin road. She is suffering from a fractured skull and probably from internal injuries, physicians said.

Mrs. Clark was riding on the truck by the side of her son-in-law, Isam Pittman, of 491 West Tenth street. A sudden gust of wind, which caught the umbrella she was holding to shield them from the sun, was held responsible for her fall.

Riding on the truck with them were Mrs. Pittman and three other children of Mrs. Clark, Lucille, her 12-year-

HOUSE WILL BEGIN DISCUSSION TODAY OF APPROPRIATIONS

Highway Department Probe To Be Considered in Senate—Tax Reform May Come Up.

With appropriations, recommended by the committee for 1926, one million dollars in excess of the anticipated revenue of the state for that year, the house today faces the task of considering the first biennial finance sheet, under the new law.

For approximately one week the appropriations committee has been considering the numerous demands by state institutions and has tracked as far as possible recommendations made by the budget committee, it is stated.

By bringing in a report today the committee will establish a new record in the history of the assembly for quick action of the session.

Meeting of Senate.

The state senate will convene at 11 o'clock this morning for a heavy week's grind of legislative matters, faced by the probability of the injection of fight for tax reform.

President J. Howard Ennis expects that the senate will be able to dispose of its business this week by starting sessions at 10 o'clock in the morning and adjourning at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, but if the pressure of work warrants it, he will have sessions opened at an earlier hour.

More than half of the session is over, and with the week which starts today, it is likely that appropriation measures will commence flowing into the senate from the house of representatives, since the latter body will start work today on the finance sheet, according to announcement by Chairman Fernor Barrett of the house appropriations committee.

Highway Probe.

The senate will be asked today to take action on a resolution providing for an investigation of the highway department. A similar measure was defeated in the house of representatives recently, but Senator J. C. Hutchison, author of the resolution, said that this measure attacks the matter from another angle.

Hughes county will figure prominently among measures discussed on the senate floor this week, a bill to create the new county having been prepared for its third reading. The new county would be cut from portions of Twiggs, Laurens and Wilkinson, and Montrose would be the county seat.

Sunday dancing will figure on the senate calendar during the week. The measure prohibiting such dancing has been approved by committee and is now ready to be passed.

Hot fight for and against the measure is expected.

New York, July 26.—(AP)—A united drive will be staged during the week of August 29 to acquaint northern states with the purposes of the Confederate memorial being constructed on Stone Mountain, near Atlanta, Ga. The program is under the auspices of the Stone Mountain committee of the second federal reserve district, of which Bernard M. Baruch is honorary chairman.

MOVE TO ABOLISH TRADE COMMISSION BEGUN BY NORRIS

Nebraska Republican Accuses Regulatory Body of Partisan Policy Favoring Big Business.

Nebraska Republican Accuses Regulatory Body of Partisan Policy Favoring Big Business.

PROPOSED FIGHT OF LONG STANDING

Appointment of Humphrey Seen as Spark That Touched Off Battle of Liberals.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, July 26.—A move to abolish the federal trade commission, long hinted, has come out into the open, and will be carried to the next congress. The fight against the agency set up during the Wilson administration to regulate business will be led by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, irregular republican, who says that it is packed with reactionaries, and as presently constituted, would not see a wrong committed by big business.

Norris gave notice of his intention in a statement issued by the people's legislative service, of which the late Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, was the guiding spirit. Norris recently declined the mantle of La Follette as leader of the third party movement, but he has thus indicated that he will lead the battles of the La Follette followers in congress.

Norris asked: "What is the use of having a federal trade commission? If we are going to let the big fellows eat the little ones up, why not let them do it directly without burdening the taxpayers with the expense of selecting some reactionary men to give approval to the devouring process?"

This fight on the federal trade commission has long been brewing. It was precipitated by the appointment this spring of William E. Humphrey, a conservative, to which many progressive republicans objected, along with democrats. Humphrey's accession gave the conservatives control of the commission, formerly dominated by Hutton Thompson, a democrat, protégé of Wilson, who was particularly active against big business.

As soon as Humphrey became a member of the commission, the procedure was changed, so that there was less publicity to cases against business, and complaints were not issued in so many instances as formerly. Thompson and Commissioner Nugent, another democrat, protested the change, but were outvoted.

Others beside Senator Norris have criticized the commission as it now works, including Senator Borah, of Idaho. On the other hand, Senator Butler, of Massachusetts, chairman of the republican national committee, advocates abolition of the commission but for entirely different reasons. He says there are too many commissioners here investigating business.

Recently the federal trade commission stopped an investigation of the alleged "electric trust," authorized by a resolution introduced by Norris, and Norris called attention to this in his statement. He said that the electric trust "is a powerful political factor, as powerful perhaps as any other in the United States, and now the federal trade commission refuses to investigate."

MAYOR OF MIAMI, FORMER GEORGIAN, FOUND DEAD IN BED

Miami, Fla., July 26.—Parker A. Henderson, mayor of Miami, and prominent in the city's business and banking circles, was found dead this morning at his home here when his valet went to awaken him. Physicians summoned to attend him declared death due to apoplexy.

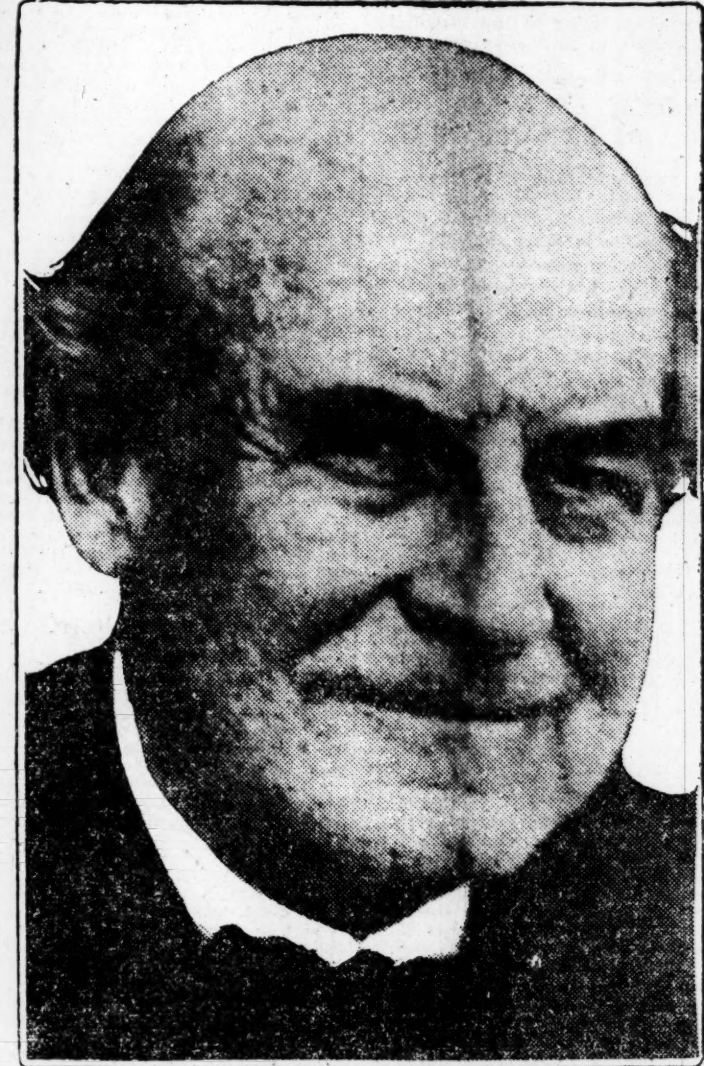

Mayor Henderson had only served about a month of his present term, but previously was mayor of Miami from November 1, 1915, to November 1, 1917.

He was born in Hampton, Ga., January 7, 1855, resided in Moultrie, Ga., a few years and came to Miami about 17 years ago.

He was in the lumber business and was also a director in the First National bank, and in the First Trust and Savings bank, and interested in other Miami business and civic undertakings.

Mrs. Henderson and the younger son were summoned from Asheville, N. C., and the older son from New York. Mrs. A. J. Henderson, 75, of Hampton, Ga., mother of the mayor arrived in Miami a few hours after his death to visit him and was in the city when the tragedy upon her arrival here.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Bryan Expected Early Death

RECALLS CONVERSATION AT BIRTHDAY PARTY

Declares Warm Supporter

William Jennings Bryan did not expect to live through another presidential campaign, said A. D. Fairbairn, a Washington newspaperman, who is now touring the south testing its attitude on a new tax bill, in recalling Sunday a personal conversation with the commoner at his birthday party at Lincoln, Neb., on March 19, 1924.

"Mr. Bryan, they may nominate you in New York after all," said Fairbairn.

"No," answered Bryan. "There are two reasons why they will not. First I am too old. Secondly I honestly do not believe I would live long enough to complete my term, if I should be elected. I do not come from a long-lived family, and I fear this probably will be my last national campaign."

CAPITAL STUNNED BY BRYAN'S DEATH

Washington, July 26.—(AP)—News of the death of William Jennings Bryan came to Washington with stunning suddenness, and at a time when his name was blazing the headlines much as it did at the heights of his political career 20 years ago.

His efforts at Dayton, where he had fought with great spirit over the question of evolution, had given friends here the impression that he was in vigorous health, and it had been predicted freely that his voice would ring out when the next congress assembled in a movement to throw into senate and house debate the cause for which he had fought in Tennessee.

None would venture to predict the political effect of the death of the commoner. In recent years, his visits to the capital had been infrequent, and then his purpose always generally was described as to chat with friends among the membership and in the press galleries.

Notwithstanding the absence of the Nebraska from the capital for a long period, he continued to hold staunch friends in and out of congress. And even though his personal stamp was absent, many pieces of legislation came to be viewed as bearing his approval.

Bryan Succumbed Fighting for God As He Saw Light

Comment Made On Bryan Death

Locust Valley, L. I., July 26.—John W. Davis, defeated democratic presidential candidate at the last election, when informed by the United News of the death of William Jennings Bryan, gave out the following statement:

"I am sure that Mr. Bryan went as he would have wished to go, fighting for the beliefs that were nearest his heart. In this sense, his death is in keeping with his life. Not even those who most disagreed with him ever questioned his courage or the deep sincerity of his convictions, whether religious or political.

"For 30 years he has been among the foremost figures in American life, and during that time has voiced the sentiments of millions of his countrymen and influenced the thought of countless others. Many of the things he advocated, in the face of bitter opposition, are now among the accepted policies of the nation. The passing of such a figure is a great loss, not only to his friends but to the country at large. The example he set of devotion to principle, no matter at what cost or against what odds, is one our countrymen may well cherish."

Comment Made On Bryan Death.

Locust Valley, L. I., July 26.—(AP) President Coolidge was informed tonight of the death of William Jennings Bryan through the Associated Press. While no statement was forthcoming tonight, it was said Mr. Coolidge probably would pay tribute tomorrow, either in a statement or in a message of condolence to Mrs. Bryan, to the man who was his close friend and supporter.

The president and Mr. Bryan were warm personal friends, and just before the executive departed from Washington, Mr. Bryan was a luncheon guest at the white house.

DAWES PAYS TRIBUTE TO BRYAN'S CHARACTER.

Denver, Col., July 26.—(AP)—Vice President Charles G. Dawes, on being informed of the death of William Jennings Bryan, issued the following statement to the Associated Press:

"I have been a friend of Mr. Bryan for 38 years since we started as young lawyers in Lincoln, Neb. Throughout all these years of work and strenuous public service, there none represented a higher personal character. In all he did, Bryan was in earnest, and in it all he tried to do good. Those who knew him best respected most his motives and his sincerity. He never did unworthy or mean things, as we all are, but he was trying always to do the right as he saw it."

"Of his great influence on the public thought of his day, his public services and his transcendent ability as an orator, I will leave to others to speak. But I want simply as an old friend and neighbor for many years to pay my tribute of respect to a good and a great man, whose life has been one of high purpose and helpfulness and whose death brings a sense of personal loss."

GOVERNOR AL SMITH ADDS HIS TRIBUTE.

Monmouth Beach, N. J., July 26.—(AP)—Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, who is spending the weekend here, when informed of the death of William Jennings Bryan, said:

"I hear this with a great deal of regret. He was a vigorous American, and even those who differed with his ideas had great regard for him. Mr. Bryan, in supporting William Gibbs McAdoo, was one of Mr. Smith's friends."

BRYAN ENTITLED TO SIGNAL HONORS IN FUNERAL RITES

Washington, July 27.—(AP)—Funeral arrangements here for William Jennings Bryan, if tentative plans for his burial at Arlington National cemetery are carried out, will accord to the wishes of Mrs. Bryan, but they undoubtedly will take on an impressive character.

As a colonel of the Third Nebraska Volunteer infantry during the war with Spain, the commoner is entitled to a military funeral and the firing of a salute over his grave, but because of his long advocacy of the cause of peace, the military features of the ceremony tonight remained a matter of doubt.

Even without this, the funeral services and the interment of the body of the statesman-politician cannot help but be marked by all of the honors the people and the government can bestow.

Should these plans be carried out, his friends undoubtedly will ask that the body be allowed to repose in state, probably in the rotunda of the capitol, where many of the leaders of American political life have been placed for a last view by their fellow-citizens.

Indian Exhibit Planned.

Philadelphia, July 26.—(AP)—Announcement of an exhibit of American Indian life and civilization at the Sequi-Centennial exposition here next year was made during the visit at exposition headquarters of J. G. Sanders, of Tulsa, Okla., secretary of the Society of Oklahoma Indians. Twenty-six tribes will participate in the exhibit, which will have a building of its own.

ARLINGTON BURIAL PLANNED FOR HIM

End Came Just as He Had Prepared To Launch National Fight Upon Teaching of Evolution.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Dayton, Tenn., July 26.—William Jennings Bryan, three times presidential nominee of the democratic party and known the world over for his eloquence, died here this afternoon.

The end came while the great commoner was asleep, and was attributed by physicians to apoplexy. He had retired to his room shortly after eating a large dinner to take a short rest. Mrs. Bryan sent the family chauffeur, James McCartney, to wake him about 4:30 and it was learned then that he was dead.

Dr. W. F. Thomason and Dr. A. C. Broyles, who examined the body, expressed the opinion Mr. Bryan had been dead between thirty and forty-five minutes before they arrived.

Burial in Arlington.

The death occurred in the residence of Richard Rogers, which had been assigned to the Bryans during their stay here.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed late tonight but Mrs. Bryan indicated interment would be in Arlington cemetery. Mr. Bryan, who was a colonel of the Third Nebraska volunteers during the Spanish-American war, on several occasions had expressed a desire to be buried in Arlington.

Mr. Bryan's death came on the eve of another crusade he had planned to carry before the American people—a battle against modernism. He returned to Dayton this morning after having made addresses yesterday at Jasper and Winchester, Tenn., and after having completed arrangements for the early publication of the speech he was to have made in closing the trial of John T. Scopes, who recently was found guilty of violating Tennessee's anti-evolution law.

Despite the strenuous program which Mr. Bryan had been following as a member of the prosecution staff in the Scopes case and as leader of the fundamentalists, he appeared in excellent health.

Never Felt Better.

Shortly before Mr. Bryan entered his room to rest, he told his wife he had never felt better in his life and was ready to go before the country to wage his fight in behalf of fundamentalism.

About 4:30 o'clock, Mrs. Bryan said she felt her husband had slept long enough and so she sent the chauffeur, who also was his personal attendant, to wake him. McCartney shook Mr. Bryan twice before he noticed the latter was not breathing. The physicians and A. B. Andrews, a neighbor, then were summoned hurriedly.

Mrs. Bryan accepted the shock bravely and remained calm.

"I am happy that my husband died without suffering and in peace," she said.

Awaits Son's Arrival.

"You know he was a colonel in the Spanish-American war and since it was his wish to rest in Arlington, we probably will place him there," she continued, "but no definite decision will be reached until we hear from my son, William Jennings Bryan, Jr."

Sue K. Hicks, who was associated with Mr. Bryan in the recent trial, and Mr. Andrews remarked upon Mrs. Bryan's composure.

Tignall Youngster Gives Picnic to 11 Grandparents

JOHN JOE WARE, AGE 7 MONTHS, RICH IN KIN

BY BOYCE FICKLEN, JR.

Washington, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—A Wilkes county boy—only 7 months old—the son of a Wilkes county banker, claims to be the richest boy in Georgia today.

His name is John Joe Ware, of Tignall, Ga., and his parents and friends have laid down the gauge, not to Georgia alone but to any other state, to show cause if they can why the above claim should not stand.

The richest boy in Georgia? Yes. Being a banker's son, this might seem the idle boast of a common braggart if John Joe's extraordinary wealth consisted of stocks and bonds and bank balances or other evidences of riches expressed by the dollar mark. But this happens not to be the case.

John Joe Ware's riches consist of living grandparents, of whom there are 11 and all of whom gathered at Tignall this week to celebrate the youngster's seventh month anniversary. The proud possessor of so many living grandparents was the guest of honor at a family picnic last Monday, the basket dinner being contributed to by four generations of the same family. The little fellow carried off the honors of the occasion with becoming ease and grace and was obliging enough to smile his sweetest while a photographer was making a picture of the remarkable group although he seemed puzzled to know just why such a fuss was being made over him.

In this unique family group were John Joe Ware and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Ware, of Tignall; his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. David, of Tignall, and his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Ware, of near Danburg; his great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George H. David and Mrs. J. J. Wilkinson, of Tignall; and his great-great-grandmother, Mrs. W. D. Duna-way, of Atlanta, who is 74 years old.

Other guests included J. T. Duna-way, of Atlanta, Mrs. Belle Fortson, Simpson Ware, L. D. Ware and James A. Moss.

BRYAN IS FOUND DEAD IN HIS BED

Bryan's courage, as she took charge of arrangements.

"During all the excitement, Mrs. Bryan was the calmest person in the house," Mr. Andrew said. "She took complete charge of affairs and showed more nerve than I have ever seen in a woman—and she is an invalid, too."

George W. Rappleyea, who instituted the anti-evolution law, called to express sympathy to Mrs. Bryan in excellent health and his friends long-distance calls of love and sympathy were received at the home.

Dayton Plunged in Sorrow.

At Dayton, it found it almost impossible to realize that the commoner was dead. During the morning, many of the citizens had seen him at the Southern Methodist Episcopal church and had heard him call in a prayer which citizens described as one of the most beautiful ever offered in the church. He appeared in excellent health and his friends expected him to place in his battle against modernism all the vigor and eloquence which marked all his campaigns and the famous "Cross of Gold" speech.

In his addresses at Jasper and Winchester yesterday, Mr. Bryan spoke with unusual vigor, and he was encouraged by the applause of the hundreds who heard him. Last night, he returned to Chattanooga, and there, there completed arrangements for the early publication of the speech which was to have been delivered during the Scopes trial.

Early today, he joined A. W. Lessly, Vernon Keith and Miss Betty Harms at breakfast before leaving for Dayton. Mr. Lessly accompanied him to Dayton, and while en route Mr. Bryan talked and wrote to the day and of the appeal to be made by Scopes to the supreme court.

Suffered With Diabetes.

The commoner expressed his determination then to "see the case through." Mr. Bryan showed no signs of illness, but Mr. Lessly said he told him he was suffering from diabetes.

Although severely criticized by special writers and some modernists during the Scopes trial, Mr. Bryan did not appear affected by this during the trial, however, he was vexed by annoying questions.

In Chattanooga, tonight, Captain Marion Perkins, of that city's police force, who was in charge of a squad of officers here during the trial, said many threats had been made against the life of Mr. Bryan.

Family Widely Separated.

The death of Mr. Bryan found his family widely separated. William Jennings Bryan, Jr., who came here to assist his father in the Scopes case, returned to Los Angeles, Calif. Mrs. Francis H. Baird, his eldest sister, was in her home at Lincoln, Neb. Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owens, a daughter, was in Mount Vernon, Ohio, to fill a Chattanooga engagement.

During the days of the Scopes trial, the heat in Dayton was most oppressive, and the court room crowded to the doors. Mr. Bryan was necessarily seated inside the rail at the counsel table where there was very little air. While he carried a palm-leaf fan, there was little circulation of breeze through the room and he seemed to feel the heat exceedingly. However, as far as known, he made no complaints and there was nothing to indicate that the torridity was in any way undermining his health. It is not known here if Mr. Bryan had previously suffered any heart affliction.

Not Bothered By Attacks.

While representatives of the press at the Scopes trial at Dayton received the impression that Mr. Bryan was greatly perturbed over personal attacks by special writers, especially the vitriolic jibes of H. L. Mencken, of Baltimore, he showed no evidence of this. On the contrary, he appeared to be enjoying the preparation for launching his fight throughout the country in behalf of the Bible and against theories of evolution presented by Clarence Darrow and Dudley Field Malone during the Scopes trial.

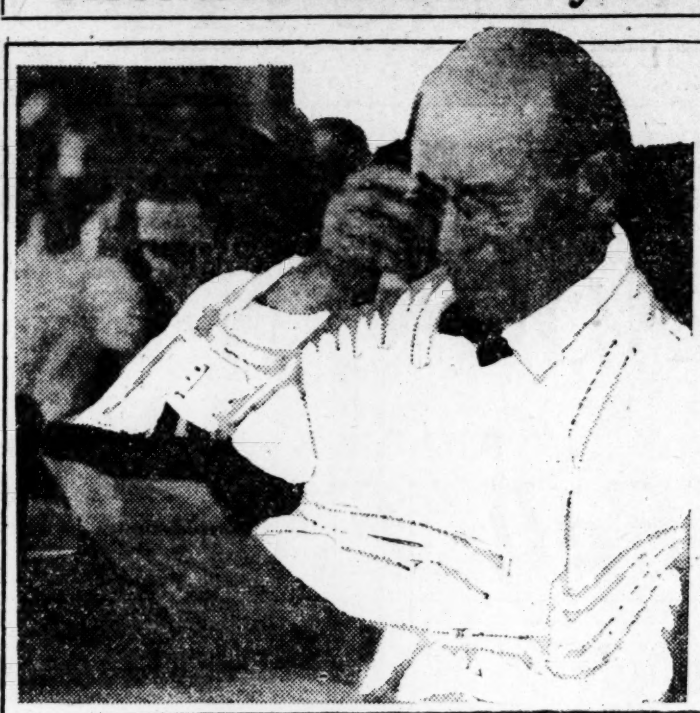

Even at the time Mr. Bryan died, his friends here were contemplating arrangements for him to deliver his famous sermon, "What Will I Do With Jesus?" tomorrow evening.

Before leaving Miami, Fla., for Dayton, Mr. Bryan announced he would deliver this sermon on the first Sunday afternoon after his arrival. On this occasion, however, he delivered another sermon, explaining that it would have been unfair to the defense to speak on the original text.

Mr. Bryan had planned to address the Dayton Progressive club tomorrow night on plans for the Fundamentalist Union to be erected here in his honor. Tuesday, he was to speak in Knoxville.

Mrs. Bryan could receive only a few of the hundreds of persons who called at the home to express sympathy.

Friends of the commoner—and he had many of them here, for Dayton is almost wholly within the ranks of fundamentalism—remained in front of the home until a late hour tonight, recounting the deeds of their champion.

After Mr. Rappleyea had called at the home, he stated that Mr. Bryan had invited him recently to call at his residence tonight for a talk. During the morning, Mr. Bryan had told a friend that he appreciated a tribute Mr. Rappleyea had paid him during the closing moment of the trial.

SISTER IS OVERCOME WHEN TOLD NEWS

Thomas S. Allen, sister of William Jennings Bryan, was overcome when she was informed tonight by The Associated Press of the death of the great commoner.

Mrs. Allen had been on an outing with Mr. Allen at Birch Plank Inn, on Vermillion Lake, near Tower, Minn.

Mrs. Allen said she saw Mr. Bryan last several months ago when he was a guest at the Allen home.

HIS SON AND DAUGHTER DEEPLY SHAKEN BY NEWS

Los Angeles, July 26.—(P)—William Jennings Bryan, Jr., and his sister, Mrs. Richard L. Hargreaves, will leave here tomorrow for Dayton, Tenn. They made this announcement tonight through Mrs. Hargreaves' husband, who explained that the commoner's son and daughter had been deeply shaken by the news of his sudden death and were making preparations to join their mother as soon as possible.

"Although we all knew Mr. Bryan's health had not been of the best in recent months," said Mr. Hargreaves, "the news of his death was utterly unexpected and a great shock to us."

HELD EVOLUTION FIGHT GREATEST OF CAREER

William Jennings Bryan regarded the contest of 22 years growing from the "Scopes" trial as the greatest fight of a career "not without fights," he said shortly after the trial. Mr. Bryan told an Associated Press representative at Dayton last week that he expected to make many addresses, for which he would not permit admission to be charged. He stressed the issues, as he constructed, after the first court test of the Tennessee statute prohibiting the teaching of evolution theories.

From the opening of the trial he was especially in earnest, insisting throughout that a battle was being waged against revealed religion and Christianity. He was generally regarded as the greatest efforts of his career, suggesting that it would perhaps be his last extended oratorical effort. When arguments were waived and the case sent to the jury without final speechmaking, Mr. Bryan said that he would nevertheless deliver his prepared address later, and the first succeeding days in Dayton after the trial were spent in revising his manuscript.

There was no indication of illness in the great commoner during the trial. On his arrival at Dayton a few days in advance of the opening of the case, his apparent physical fitness was generally remarked. He spoke only once in court, but delivered several addresses in Rhea county. His public appearances included a speech at a banquet in his honor by the Dayton Progressive club, an informal address to his fellow prosecution lawyers and their guests at Morgan Springs, two religious addresses in Dayton and one at Ben ville. Saturday he spoke at Winchester, carrying out a promise made to Attorney General A. T. Stewart during the trial that at its close he would deliver an address to the attorney general's fellow townsmen.

Felt Much at Home.

As the "leader of the fundamentalists," Mr. Bryan was made to feel very much at home in Dayton and Rhea county. His entrance and departure from the court room were marked by a succession of handshakes. Rhea county politically has been found frequently in the republican column, and many of opposite political faith were among the most ardent admirers of the former democratic candidate for president and cabinet officer.

"Will you let a life-long republican shake your hand, Mr. Bryan?" was a question heard more than once in the court room.

"One of his last discussions with Dayton folk concerned the suggestion that a college devoted to fundamentalist doctrine be established there.

There was none to deny the power of his influence in party councils. Even his political opponents recognized the weight of his personal support in questions dealing with morality and kindred subjects.

In the choosing of democratic nominees for office, from representative up to president, the Nebraskan, although many times pronounced a non-factor by his opponents, wielded a strong hand. None could attack him in congressional debate without strong rejoinder from his friends, and his approval eagerly was sought by aspirants to office.

Sought His Favor.

Democrats, in looking about for presidential nominees, for years had been in the habit of putting their ears to the ground to determine the direction of Bryan's opinion. His powerful voice booming from the platform was hard to realize. His death leaves democratic leaders in a puzzled state as to what will occur within what is known as the hard and fast Bryan following, which has been so potent in party affairs.

Mr. Bryan was an admirer of the late Senator La Follette in many of the latter's efforts, and this feeling was mutual. The death of these two within a comparatively short time leaves national politics particularly in sections where they held most power, in a state of more or less uncertainty.

Notwithstanding his fights within his own party, Mr. Bryan generally was acknowledged as a strong party man, and his political courage was admired by his opponents. In the staunchest republican circles here, he had many close personal friends. Expressions of regret over his death were heard from all quarters here tonight.

ernists, but the faith of Mr. Bryan remained unshaken.

Someone remarked in Dayton only a few days ago that the intensely religious people of that section would not have thought it anything unusual had Mr. Bryan been swept away to heaven in a chariot of fire, after his great battle with Darrow.

And now Mr. Bryan has gone. Only the dead ashes of a remarkable man rest tonight in Dayton. And, having sensed the religious fervor of this section of Tennessee, it is not stretching the imagination to picture some of the great commoner's followers visualizing his passing as his reward. In their eyes, God has claimed him as His own.

Ten people are in the act, including Countess Modena, famous European violinist, and Peggy Stewart, late of the Metropolitan opera ballet.

Other high-class acts on the new bill are Charlie Allman and George Hamilton, comedians in "That Ain't Nothin'"; Earl Foster and Ethel Ray in a comedy skit, "After Dinner"; Wilbur Mack; Arch Woody, with his box fiddle and musical saw, and Alexander Patty, world's greatest upside down juggler.

Minor Glynn's sensation, "Man and Maid," is the Loew feature picture for the week.

"Mercedes."

(At Keith's Forsyth.)

"Mercedes," assisted by the marvelous mystic, Mlle. Stanton, will present the greatest sensation of vaudeville to patrons of Keith's Forsyth theater all this week as the headline feature of another good program of circus and variety acts.

As a special added attraction, Al Garbelle and company with four dancing Carenos presents an elaborate skit entitled "Sins, Sins and Diamonds." Ann Clifton offers some syncopated songs while Olive Briscoe and Al Raugh contribute their share to the program in "Conquered." Perez and Marquette have a novelty treat in "Origins of Jazz Blues."

Zane Grey Feature.

(At the Rialto.)

Jack Holt, Noah Beery and Billie Dove are the three popular favorites in "The Light of the Stars," the new feature on the program for the Rialto theater's screen, opening at 11 o'clock this morning and running the week. The picture was made by Paramount under the direction of William K. Howard from the book by Zane Grey.

"The Light of the Stars" is a colorful desert romance of the Arizona border, where desperate outlaws clash with the sturdy Americans who are building up the great range country. The bad man of the west played out his losing hand there.

"Black Cyclone."

(At the Howard.)

"Black Cyclone," starring Rex, the king of wild horses, which opens at the Howard theater today, is said to be a more elaborate story and production than the first picture with the marvelous black stallion, "The King of Wild Horses." This picture tells the story of the winning of Lady, a beautiful dappled gray mare, and his great love and protection of her; and his friendship for a man who saved his life from the treacherous quicksands.

Virginia Futrell, popular soprano and Allen Morgan Stephens, violinist and pianist, will present an entertaining musical number.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTEEN YEARS

AGO the first gas mains were laid in Pall Mall, London, to furnish light for public use.

Until less than 40 years ago Gas remained good for nothing but light. Then a few house-keepers were persuaded to cook with it, a few manufacturers were induced to try it—and the era of Gas Heat was foreshadowed.

Gas Heat now is becoming a fundamental of industry. Huge burners consume more Gas in a day than the average city of 50,000 people might use. Gas serves more than 5,000 industrial purposes. In the United States alone there are enough gas mains to circle the world three times.

Yet the great growth of Gas, cleanest and best fuel on earth, is just beginning. Engineers predict the smokeless day when all solid fuels shall have become obsolete for individual use.

MAN'S SHOT DEAD ON CORDELE STREET

Cordele, Ga., July 26.—While his wife was clinging to his arm, pleading with him to go home, Bert Cain, 40, automobile mechanic, was shot and killed on the streets here late last night. Ed Holliday, sawmill man of Dooly county, surrendered to the sheriff and according to the latter confessed that he fired the shots.

The tragedy was witnessed by a number of persons.

The shooting was a result of a court trial in Sumter county early this year, Cain contending that Holliday should have paid the costs. The latter denied the obligation and a quarrel followed.

Holliday was seated in an automobile, preparing to go home, according to witnesses, when Cain, with his wife, trying to pull him from the scene, approached, and drew his pistol. Holliday fired two shots quickly, both taking effect in Cain's left breast.

Cain staggered a few feet and fell dead in the street.

He is survived by his wife and six months' old child.

There has been no warrant issued for Holliday, but the grand jury will meet tomorrow and will doubtless investigate the case.

MAYOR OF NEW YORK ADDS HIS TRIBUTE

New York, July 26.—Mayor John F. Hylan, of New York, member of a faction opposed to William Jennings Bryan in democratic politics, paid tribute to the commoner when advice of his death in Dayton by the United News Sunday night.

"I regret very much to hear of the death of Colonel Bryan," said Hylan. "I have known Colonel Bryan for a great many years and always held him in high esteem. I believe that he was always sincere in any cause he espoused."

BRYAN'S SECRETARY SHOCKED AND GRIEVED

Macon, Va., July 26.—I am too deeply grieved and shocked to say anything tonight, other than that I have lost a true friend," declared W. E. Thompson, secretary to William Jennings Bryan, when informed of the sudden death of the commoner at Dayton, Tenn., by an Associated Press correspondent. Mrs. Thompson, who was visiting at the home of Sam McEwan, left immediately for Dayton.

GENERAL STEWART EXPRESSES SORROW

Winchester, Tenn., July 26.—(P)—Attorney General A. T. Stewart, who prosecuted the Scopes case at Dayton, tonight expressed great sorrow at the death of Mr. Bryan and felt that the world has lost one of its foremost citizens in his passing. He said:

"I am inexpressibly grieved to learn of the death of Colonel Bryan. He was one of the greatest men of our time, and I feel the world has lost one of its foremost citizens. The cause of fundamentalism, to which he has been so devoted for the past several years, has lost its greatest exponent, but as he often said, the cause will go on. I feel, too, that the cause will be strengthened by his having been engaged in it up to the time of his death. Colonel Bryan was a staunch, true American citizen and the country's loss is, indeed, a sad one."

KNOXVILLE EXPECTING BRYAN VISIT TUESDAY

Knoxville, Tenn., July 26.—William J. Bryan, who expired suddenly at Dayton, Tenn., this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock, that he would leave the Rhea county town Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, arriving here shortly after noon.

Mr. Bryan had accepted an invitation to make a tour into the Great Smoky mountains, now proposed as a site for a national park, and was to have started the trip Tuesday afternoon accompanied by President A. C. of a civic organization. At Elkmont, Tenn., he would have been joined by Louis H. Spillman, president of the Tennessee board of education, a life-long friend and former classmate of the commoner in Nebraska.

The commoner, early in the afternoon, had informed H. C. Sanford, teacher of the A. B. C. Bible class, one of the largest men's Bible classes in Tennessee, that he would accept an invitation to deliver an address here and plans for a great open-air meeting next Sunday morning were in state of preparation when news of the death occurred. Mr. Bryan had announced his subject for this address to be "What Shall I Do With Jesus?"

NEWTON D. BAKER PAYS BRYAN TRIBUTE

Cleveland, Ohio, July 26.—(P)—The country has lost its leader in politics and religious movements, Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, declared tonight when informed of the death of William Jennings Bryan.

"Mr. Bryan had been the undisputed leader in a great cause in political circles and religious movements for more than a generation," Mr. Baker said. "His death will cause widespread grief both among those who followed him and those who admired his firm stand and the greatness of his talents. I have known Mr. Bryan for 30 years and I am greatly grieved to hear of his sudden death."

SIKI STABBED IN GOTHAM FIGHT

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN.

Nashville, Tenn., July 26.—The Atlanta Crackers took hold of their bats today and slammed out a 12 to 5 victory over the Volunteers, who beat them out of second place last week.

Tomorrow the Crackers open at home against Chattanooga. Preceding the game at Atlanta tomorrow President John D. Martin, of the Southern League, will present to the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Atlanta, the attendance cap that the Crackers won with their 16,000 people on opening day.

Today's game was a slugfest only in the latter stages. Early in the game, pitching was tight and few runs were scored.

The Crackers got eight of their runs in the fifth frame, when they knocked Phipps from the box and Olsen took some pounding before stopping the track meet.

McLaughlin went all the way for Atlanta. He went up 12 hits and struck out four men. Phipps showed a bit of wildness, giving three bases on balls and executing two wild pitches.

WHITE SOX BEAT THREE HURLERS.

Detroit, July 26.—Three Tiger pitchers could not stop a White Sox assault and Chicago beat Detroit, 5 to 6 today, thereby winning the series. An opening inning rampage by the Tigers drove Faber from the hill before two men could be retired. Thurston held Detroit scoreless the remainder of the way, except in the ninth when two hits in a row counted a run.

One Detroit run was the result of the three errors Chicago made. Wingo grounded to Davis, who threw past Sherry. Wingo tried to pick Wingo off second and his throw went into centerfield. Wingo advanced third and then scored home when Mostil's throw to the plate to head him off got by him.

Volcanic Activities Alter Major Summit Tenacity

New York, July 26.—(AP)—The major league peaks have heaved and buckled again last week under first place eruptions of the leaders which continued to rumble threateningly tonight.

Volcanic activity in both circuits altered summit tenacity for the sixth time in the American and for the seventh time in the National since the first week in July. The Pittsburgh Pirates, flung from the crest early in the week, remounted the National pinnacle as a new outburst from the depths of eighth place Boston shocked the persistent Giants. Tumbled by a similar early American flare flung the St. Louis Browns, Philadelphia Athletics recovered later to regain the heights as rain compelled Washington to abandon the defense.

The statistics of the week brought forth paper and pencil today to record the damage consequently found both races still settling at the top with the Giants a half game ahead of the Pirates in the National than they had been a week ago and Philadelphia gripping the American left a little more securely than before the week's upheaval.

Robins Hold Third.

A single victory for Brooklyn in two starts, carried home on the speed of the winning run when the team of 17 strikeouts, sufficed to hold the Robins in third place by a mere half game against the challenge of Cincinnati. The day's action was a series of contests without a defeat, the uncertain Phillies dodged back to the top of the second division as the St. Louis

Senators Win Twin Bill.

New York, July 26.—The Washington Senators last appearance of the season here, defeated the Yankees today in the first game of a doubleheader, 4 to 3, and 4 to 3, the second game going 11 innings. McNeely's single scored Peckinpaugh's home run in the ninth.

Third baseman Dugan of New York was carried off the field in the eighth when his injured knee came out of place. Cossel extended his winning streak to 10 straight in the first game, although he was relieved for a pinch hitter in the ninth.

Novel Questionnaire Form For Auto Truck Owners

The following interesting questionnaire is published by the Brake Service Shop, 52 Houston street, brake specialists on all makes of cars and trucks, and well-known Atlanta concern.
The questionnaire, unique in its get-up and in its questions and answers, is designed for readers of The Constitution who are automobile owners who, it is believed, will appreciate advice and suggestions from a firm of recognized brake trouble specialists.
The questionnaire follows:
Q.—When should the brakes on my car be relined?
A.—When because of wear, lining is reduced to insufficient thickness to assure proper braking effect.
Q.—How should the brakes be relined?
A.—Find a place where the electrical drill and countersinking method of relining is in use and where expert adjustment can be had.
Q.—Why do a repairman ordinarily use split rivets in his brake work?
A.—In order to do the job cheaply rather than do it well. He either does not care or does not fully consider the injurious effects resulting from such practice.
Q.—Why do brakes heat on long continued application?
A.—The brake converts the energy of motion into heat and this is a case of producing heat more rapidly than it is dissipated.
Q.—Is locking of the brakes when very hot the fault of the lining?
A.—Locking of the brakes may be the fault of the lining as some linings contain rubber which devalenizes and swells at high temperature. With too close adjustment, external heat, however, drum expansion due to heat sometimes exceeds clearance and brakes become locked.
Q.—How can skidding be avoided?
A.—Skidding can be avoided to an extent by making turns on slippery pavement at low speed with clutch engaged and rear brake or studs. After the skidding motion is once started steer in the direction of the skid if possible.
Q.—Is it safer to use the motor as a brake on slippery pavement?
A.—The frictional resistance of tires and pavement is very low when wet and very slight application of the brakes will skid the car. This is avoided by the use of the motor.
Q.—Will the use of the motor as a brake help to prevent serious heating?
A.—The use of the motor on long steep hills is a necessity to prevent overworking and overheating of the brakes.
Q.—What is the cause of squeaking brakes?
A.—Squeak in brakes is caused by a number of factors. The most common is high cause is drum vibration. If the tone is low the cause is in other parts, such as pull rod connections, loose brake shoes or studs, loose spring shackles, bolts, unequal pressure of lining on drums, rivets bearing on drum, particles of grit or metal imbedded in the lining, scored drums and drums out of round. These are the usual offenders.
Q.—When should brakes be adjusted?
A.—When driver is able to push pedal to floor board, when brakes are dragging, heating, squeaking or otherwise giving unsatisfactory service.
The above information on automobile brakes is given by the Brake Service Shop, 52 Houston street, Atlanta, Ga. This company specializes on automobile brake work using the latest model electrical drill and countersinking machinery for all brake work. Free adjustments are given on all cars which they service, on all others a small charge is made. The use of machinery by this company not only offers the best to be had in the usual time. You know the cost in advance.

Service To Patrons Pays, Big Atlanta Firm Finds

A veritable paradise for the lover of pretty plumbing supplies, heating appliances of all descriptions and apparatus for electric arc welding, boiler-making and sheet metal work, might be appropriately applied to both the showrooms and warehouse and shop of Lynch & Johnson. The firm is distributor for the famous Gill oil burners and is headquarters for a score of articles which are known far and wide as standards.
At the showrooms, at 53 East Hunter street, one will find in attractive array a beautiful lot of plumbing fixtures, heating apparatus and other similar stock which the modern housewife is recognizing as more essential than ever before. At the warehouse and shop is every conceivable piece of machinery necessary in boiler-making and sheet metal work, to the delicate bits of mechanism required for other work. At this place one will also find fire escapes of the most approved type, special tanks and other necessities of this modern age.
At the office and showrooms on East Hunter street the public receives a most cordial welcome, whether or not purchases are made. Anyone whose fancy delights in viewing modern household appliances in heating and plumbing work, or is interested in the boiler-making, sheet metal work, tanks, etc., will find courteous officials, salesmen and others who will be pleased to explain the advantages and merits of respective stocks and will act as guides through the palatial interior.
The same invitation holds true at the big warehouse and shops, located in rear of 70 Ponce de Leon avenue. The Gill oil burner demonstrations are given to anyone interested. The Lynch & Johnson firm, in its dealings with the public, has impressed patrons with its efficiency and service in all matters. Its work bears a stamp of approval which the public long ago learned to recognize as the best, while its big sales force, its quality merchandise and its service has added to its reputation for reliability and honest policy.

M'CAULEY COMPANY

RECOGNIZED AS LEADER
A conspicuous part in the building program of Atlanta and many other cities in the southeast has been played by the well-known firm of J. S. McCauley & Co., general contractors, with offices at 612 Bona Allen building.
Atlanta, long blessed with enterprising and reliable contractors, can boast of no firm of builders who have taken a more prominent role in the building history of the south than the McCauley firm. Many of Atlanta's newest structures—and there have been scores during the past few months—have been erected under the supervision of McCauley contractors. In many other large southern cities the same is true—Atlanta has furnished contractors, and McCauley's stamp of reliability construction has been impressed upon many of these magnificent testimonials of the south's recovery from its period of depression.
When decisions to build are made in many instances they come swiftly. Time is a deciding factor and safe and sound construction work is as necessary in the brief space allotted for the work as if the contractor had twice the time. McCauley specializes in such work and the firm's reputation has been built in a great degree upon its known record of "jobs" completed on time and its thorough and safe construction methods.
Heads of the contracting firm are among the foremost in the business, are experienced in all phases of contracting and a lively interest in all movements looking toward the progress and development of Atlanta and the southeast. In contracting circles, and among firms of the kind McCauley contractors are recognized as leaders.
Such progressive firms as the McCauley group of contractors has contributed much to Atlanta's reputation throughout the nation, have gone a long way toward placing and maintaining the city's claim to having leaders in all phases of business. Atlanta boasts of its outstanding men and firms and those citizens who are acquainted with the part played by its contractors in this claim always associate with it the name of McCauley & Co.

FITZGERALD MAN
SHOOTS WIFE DEAD

Fitzgerald, Ga., July 26.—(Special.) Oscar Morris, 50, employee of the Fitzgerald Cotton Mills, Sunday about 9 o'clock shot and killed his wife, from whom he had been separated for some time.
Morris, with Homer Hardaway and his wife, called at the home where Mrs. Morris was staying and invited her for an automobile ride. As she got into the car, her husband, it is claimed, shot her five times. She died instantly. Morris escaped.
Morris was placed in jail last week on a peace warrant sworn out by his wife, and had been released on bond. Mrs. Morris leaves five small children.

MINISTER ASSERTS
EVOLUTION IS NOT FATAL TO RELIGION

Long Lake, Ill., July 26.—(P)—Neither Bryan nor any other man can say that if evolution is true, Christianity will die, said Rev. A. F. Bergstrom, pastor of St. Matthews' church, Chicago, in a sermon today at the closing session of the Illinois Conference Luther League convention here.
"We are not worrying about evolution," he said. "We know that evolution is true, but we know that it is not fatal to religion. A large part of the world already knows about Christ. All the world will know about Christ. We do not accept explanations of Christ by any of the new-fangled theologians. Neither Fostick, Shailer, Matthews, nor others can dictate what Christ means to us. The glory of Christ is evident."

old daughter, Ray and Ralph, 6-year-old twins.
TREE FALLS, CAUSING AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.
Five persons narrowly escaped death Sunday night in an automobile collision in Spring street, near Fifth street. Occupants of the two cars were only slightly bruised and shaken up.

They were: C. J. Browning, 38, of 268 Adair street, driver of one of the machines; an unidentified white man, who accompanied Browning; R. E. Lawson, driver of the second car, and Mrs. J. D. Lawson and T. A. Brooks.

The accident occurred shortly after a large tree in the yard of the residence of Mrs. O. L. Spurlin, of 540 Spring street, had been blown down across Spring street by the high winds that accompanied the thunderstorm Sunday afternoon. Only a narrow passageway was left on the east side of the street through which automobiles could pass.
Browning was driving north in Spring street in a heavy coach. In attempting to enter the small passageway left by the fallen tree he observed the Lawson car approaching from the south. He put on the brakes, causing his car to skid into the approaching car and toward into the curb, breaking the left rear wheel of his machine and causing considerable damage to the other auto.
Browning was arrested by Call Officers R. E. Whitley and M. B. Johnson on charges of disorderly conduct and driving a car while under the influence of liquor.

DRIVEN INTO WINDOW TO AVOID PEDESTRIAN.
A large plate glass front window at the Osburn-Abston company of Georgia, 102 West Peachtree street, was broken Sunday night when a taxicab driven by R. A. Patterson, skidded and crashed into the front of the building.
According to Call Officers J. E. Williams and J. H. Crankshaw, Patterson was driving north in West Peachtree street when suddenly an unidentified white man stepped directly into the path of the cab. In trying to avoid the man, Patterson is said to have applied the brakes to the car, which caused the car to turn around completely and crashing into the plate glass window.
No case was made at the request of officials of the company.

window on the second floor. According to officials of the Atway & Lowndes company, death resulted from a fractured skull or concussion of the brain. His back was wrenched, but not broken.

Before retiring, Mr. and Mrs. White had spent the evening in company with Hill Powell, of the Pickwick apartment, stage manager of the Howard theater and Mr. White's closest friend, it was stated Sunday night. Mr. White had appeared in a revival mood, it was stated.
Mrs. White stated that her husband and Mr. Powell were sleeping together in White's bedroom on the second floor. Mr. Powell said he did not know when Mr. White left his bed. He expressed the opinion that he had been waking in his sleep when he plunged to his death.

Inquest This Morning.
The body was removed to the funeral parlors of Atway & Lowndes and Coroner Paul Donohoe notified. An inquest is to be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the undertaking establishment.
In addition to his widow and his son, Comer White, Jr., 8 months old, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ella White, of 97 Capitol square, and two brothers, S. White, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and C. A. White, of Tampa, Fla.; and three sisters, Mrs. J. L. Starnes, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. C. A. Bueren, of Atlanta, and Mrs. B. H. Carter, of Atlanta.
Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning from the chapel of Atway & Lowndes, with Dr. Marvin Williams officiating. Mr. White had been a member of the Wesley Memorial Methodist church, of which Dr. Williams is pastor, from infancy. Interment will be in Villa Rica.

KILLED, INJURED
AS CAR OVERTURNS

Valdosta, Ga., July 26.—Goode M. Guerry, of Palatka, Fla., was instantly killed, Dan C. Ashley, of Valdosta, seriously hurt, and five others injured today when the automobile in which they were riding turned over on its side on the National highway a mile south of Jennings, Fla.

Miss Anna Belle Converse, of Valdosta, was injured internally; her sister, Mrs. Ed Farrell, of Palatka, had her ankle broken; Mrs. Dan C. Ashley, of Valdosta, had her arm broken; Harry Peeples suffered a broken leg and Ed Farrell, of Palatka, was bruised.

It is thought Guerry was trying to pass another automobile and lost control of his car. The party had been on White Springs, Fla., and were returning to Valdosta, Guerry driving. The party was picked up by a bus coming from Lake City and brought to Valdosta. Physicians had out little hope for the recovery of Dan Ashley, and also fear for the life of Miss Converse.

Guerry was the son of the late Judge Guerry, of Macon, Ga., and a nephew of Dupont Guerry, former president of Wesleyan college.

Until a few months ago he was editor of the Palatka (Fla.) News.

Guerry and Farrell had been here several days getting options on local real estate.

The Golden Beast

-BY-

E. Phillips Oppenheim

"Approve! My God, no!" Samuel exclaimed, as they continued their walk. "He's a bear of the whole show—hates it like poison. Think of Judith's doing herself to end of harm getting mixed up with such a crowd. You know some of 'em, I dare say—Dollie Bradshaw, Aggie Stuart, that Lepton, woman—the best names and the worst morals in England. Judith can take care of herself, of course, but a girl who's engaged to be married, and to a fellow like Amherst—a future marquis, you know, and that sort of thing—doesn't need to get herself talked about. Freddy's awful sore about it."

"After all, it's no one's business except their own, is it?" Paulie remarked, as he reached his hand and opened out his shooting stick.

"No one's actual business, of course," Samuel agreed, following his companion's example. "What I thought, though, was that you might have a talk with Judith on the health side of the question. It would be a knockdown blow for the old man, too, if this marriage didn't come off. There isn't much money, of course, but that doesn't matter a damn to uncle. His father bought the title all right, and it's 'Your Lordship' wherever he goes. But he's no fool. He knows the difference between the eleventh marquis and the second baron."

"Throw your cigarette away, there's a good fellow, and stop talking," Paulie enjoined, sharply. "The horn's blown and there's a covey coming down on the right ahead."

They were on their way back to the house for luncheon when they reached a bath chair drawn by a small pony. She was watching some builders at work on the site of Heggs's old cottage. Paulie stopped to wish her good morning, and she detained him.

"You see what we are doing there," she pointed out. "You know the story?"

"I have heard it," he admitted. "We are having Heggs's cottage rebuilt. My husband was very difficult about it. I was determined. I always felt that Israel Fernham laid a curse upon this place when he pulled down that cottage stone by stone and wove that it should never be put up again. All these years it has lain waste and the curse has fallen. Now I am going to have it restored, and the garden planted again with flowers. I am going to have some homeless person live there—with children, if possible. I want the birds to build in the trees again. Later they are making a pigden house. Only a few days ago I said somewhere that curses flourish in the wilderness and that the woods are full of voices are heard."

"I am a scientific man and a materialist, you know, Lady Honerton," Paulie said. "I do not believe in curses."

"You are too clever a man," she objected. "To be a materialist. You could not live in so small a world. You could not cram your brain so far as that. You know that Heggs, the lawyer, was hanged, and that Israel, Joseph's father, could have saved him if he would?"

"I have heard that story," he admitted. "It is the truth," she declared. "Heggs sat in his cell with his Bible in his hand, waiting for the reprieve that never came. When they went to take him to the scaffold, he dashed the Bible he had been reading to the ground and he cursed Israel and his whole family in the words of the Old Testament. When they hanged him the words were still on his lips."

"You dwell upon it too much, Lady Honerton. In any case, I have told you, I do not believe in curses. I believe instead in retribution. I believe in the man that man reaps as he has sown."

She lay back in her chair. They were approaching the front door of the house, and the luncheon gong was sounding. She suddenly gripped his arm with long, feverish fingers whose clutch he felt through his thick shooting coat.

"Listen," she whispered. "The others would think I am mad. You know. In my dreams I have stepped over the edge of the world. I have seen Ernest. I have heard him speak. He is very different, but he is alive."

Paulie looked at her intently. He had not the air of one humoring an hysterical woman.

"Tell me something actual," he suggested. "Tell me what clothes he wore? What sort of condition was he in?"

She fell back in her chair. She was obviously on the point of exhaustion. Joseph came fussy down the steps. "Come along, come along, Paulie," he called out. "Luncheon is being served quickly. Middleton wants us out again in three quarters of an hour. Rachel, you're overtired. I wish you'd keep away from that damned building."

INSTALLMENT VIII.

Good News and Bad.

Dinner on a continuing night of the shooting party at Honerton Chase was an unusually festive meal. Rachel had abandoned the effort to sit at the head of her table and remained in her room, and Judith took her place, was in one of her most brilliant and daring moods. She wore a gown of garnet-colored chiffon, her hair shone like black ivory under a Russian headpiece of wonderful pearls. Her complexion was so clear as to be almost unnatural. Her lips, her eyes, were never quiet for an instant. Prince Edgar sat on one side and Frederick Amherst on the other, and she flirted with both indiscriminately and slantingly. She found time, however, to play also the watchful hostess, to stimulate conversation in whatever direction it flagged. The only person to whom she did not once speak and from whom, indeed, she seemed to keep her attention as far removed as possible was Paulie.

"Dear Judith is at her best this evening," the marchioness murmured to Joseph. "What a hostess she will make! I am sure Freddy will be very proud of her. The faint note of surprise which so many people used in their amazed appreciation of Judith was at times almost an irritation."

"Judith has certainly inherited the brains of the family," he admitted. "In appearance her mother was very like her at her age."

"I can quite believe it," the marchioness assented, "a sweet face even now. I am so sorry Lady Honerton didn't feel well enough to come down this evening."

"My wife is not strong," Joseph confided. "She has had, of course, to bear such a shock as few people in the world have had to face, and it has affected her nerves."

"The certainty of it all is so terrible," the marchioness observed sympathetically. "That is the part I could not bear."

Martin, with a word of apology, presented a sheet of paper to his master on a silver salver. Joseph adjusted his pince-nez and glanced through it.

"This is the bag for the three days," he announced, raising his voice slightly. "I will read it out. Three thousand two hundred and ninety-two pheasants, two hundred and ninety-three brace of partridges, forty-three woodcock, two hundred and ten hares, three hundred and seventy-two rabbits and twenty-seven various."

There was a little murmur of congratulation. Joseph beamed upon every one.

"I am very glad," he concluded, "that the sport has been so good. Much obliged to you all for helping to give us a record three days. Middleton assured me that the shooting had never been better, and Middleton is not an easy man to please."

"The marquis had enjoyed it immensely," his wife confided. "He was saying while he was changing for dinner that there are no stands in the county to compare with yours."

"Like old Johnson, the trainer, who once shot here," Samuel Junior voiced under his breath to Joyce.

"Coughton, his neighbor," used to say, he preferred high birds and low women."

Joyce looked at him severely. "Samuel Fernham," she said, "if you were not a millionaire and unmarried I should be angry with you. As it is, I suppose I must smile. It's terrible what we impecunious young women have to put up with nowadays in our frantic search for a husband."

Samuel Junior stroked his stubby little bit of mustache. Joyce had seen for years the object of his fervent admiration, and he would have proposed to her long ago if he had had the faintest hope that she would have accepted him.

You and Judith do nothing but chaff, fellow," he complained. "You know very well that you are responsible for my lonely state."

"I'm not so sure it is altogether lonely," the young lady rejoined dryly. "London's rather a congested area nowadays, you know."

"Well, I think you girls might keep away from City's end a bit," was Samuel's plaintive protest.

"Most amusing place I know," Joyce replied. "It's such fun seeing you poor dears trying to make up your minds whether you ought to be noticed or not."

"When I'm married there'll be nothing of that sort," he declared. "No indifference at all," she retorted, shaking her head. "What on earth would your poor wife do when she wanted an evening off if you hadn't a little affair of your own to look after sometimes?"

The young man was nonplussed, as he generally was when either Judith or Joyce talked in the tropic again. "I'm only anxious to please," he announced. "You girls seem to get everything upside down nowadays. It's a little hard for me to promise to be unfaithful. I'll make a bluff of it. I'm always for taking life as it comes along."

"Samuel's perfectly sweet this evening," Joyce confided to Judith. "I hope I don't get left alone with him in the winter garden or anything like that, after dinner. I know I shall faint."

"My dear," Judith assured her, "I should love to have you in the family—even at a cousinly distance. Besides, I think Samuel ought to get down. He's too sickeningly rich for a bachelor. He needs someone to spend his money on."

"Nobody in the world needs someone to spend money on them like I do. Besides, I owe really quite a great deal. How should you feel, Mr. Sam—or shall I call you 'Sammy'—about debts contracted before marriage?"

"I'd pay 'em," Samuel Junior declared with enthusiasm—"pay 'em willingly."

"He really is wonderful," Joyce acknowledged. "Come and talk to me after dinner, Sammy. I might take you on at billiards. I owe so much money at bridge that I am afraid these people would look coldly at me if I sat down to play again tonight."

Prince Edgar glanced across at Joyce admiringly. With her piquante face and mass of chestnut hair, she was undoubtedly attractive.

"Does Lady Joyce always talk nonsense so aptly?" he inquired.

"She's rather good at it," Judith admitted. "As a matter of fact, I wish she'd marry Sammy. It would be the making of him. Sammy wants training rather than he's not a bad sort. Do you believe in the marriage de convenience, prince?"

"I have more sympathy with the type of marriage to which you are committed, Lady Judith," he replied. "Did you hear that, Freddy? Judith exclaimed. "I call it a beautifully veiled compliment for both of us. I suppose we are in love with one another, aren't we?"

"I imagine that some feeling of that sort exists," the somewhat stiff rejoinder.

"Freddy isn't really very fond of chaff," Judith confided, in an undertone—"not about sacred subjects, you know, like our affection. I am happy here but I really think I ought to leave you. I believe your mother, Freddy, is trying to catch my eye. Here goes! I'm up!"

She rose, naturally enough at precisely the right moment, and floated down the room, a perfect grace, perfectly beautiful, with a curious air of intense living radiating from her. Paulie, the one person whom she had ignored during the meal, was watching her curiously, conscious of the slight effort with which she avoided catching his eye. He was not greatly disturbed at her attitude, but he was amazed at the warmth of his own admiration as he followed her slow progress towards the door, appreciating to the fullest extent the insolent little swing of her little body, the slight retrospective curl of her lips which gave her an air almost of aloofness.

All day long he had repelled her confidences, and kept her outside the armor of a reserve which no one yet had ever succeeded in penetrating. Yet he, too, notwithstanding the gift of strength, was a man, a human being, much as others, only stronger of will and purpose. His eyes were fixed upon the door some time after it was closed. Samuel Junior's voice broke in upon a medley of reflections, unusual in a sense disquieting.
